A QUARTERLY PUBLICATION OF THE CITY OF CUPERTINO

City Manager Message

As we approach the end of the year, I reflect on our community's resilience in the face of challenge and opportunities.

2024 brought its share of obstacles, from economic uncertainties to unexpected hurdles. Yet, we have confronted these challenges head-on. We achieved significant milestones, such as resolving the City's disagreement with the California Department of Tax and Fee Administration over sales tax revenue distribution. This settlement ensures Cupertino retains vital funds through August 2024 and avoids costly litigation, contributing to our long-term fiscal stability. We also reached an agreement with the Vallco Property Owner regarding the payment of impact fees by The Rise project, ensuring regular payments to the City to address the cost of development.

We're equally focused on planning for the future. This year saw key steps toward progress, including receiving full certification from the Department of Housing and Community Development for our Housing Element. We also secured funding to expand Silicon Valley Hopper through the Transit and Intercity Rail Capital Program, which will support the service through FY 26-27.

Balancing the need to address immediate challenges while planning for the future has led to meaningful progress, and I am excited about the continued growth and resilience of our City.

Lastly, as the year ends and we gather with our loved ones, I encourage you to Shop Local this holiday season and support the wonderful businesses that make Cupertino special.

Thank you for your continued support.

City Reaches Settlement to Secure Millions in Sales Tax

In October, the City of Cupertino announced that it has resolved the dispute with the California Department of Tax and Fee Administration (CDTFA) regarding the distribution of sales tax revenues to Cupertino, which allows the City to keep the funds previously allocated and anticipated for receipt through August 2024 and avoid lengthy and costly litigation.

The City has worked diligently to reduce costs and has remained committed to providing important services to residents while balancing its budget through partnerships with the private sector and prudent Council actions, as well as leveraging innovation and enhanced resource allocation.

The City is cautiously optimistic about its improved financial outlook for the upcoming fiscal years, and remains committed to transparent communication with residents, City Council members, and staff.

Recap on Cupertino's Housing Element

The City of Cupertino has marked significant milestones in the ongoing commitment to addressing the diverse housing needs of our residents through the development of the Housing Element, a comprehensive eight-year policy document that addresses housing needs and development for all economic segments of Cupertino's population.

This spring, the City submitted the revised draft housing element to the California Department of Housing and Community Development (HCD), and received a letter notifying the City that the draft housing element meets all legal requirements for State certification.

The City swiftly moved toward the review and adoption of the housing element and related zoning ordinance amendments to rezone Priority Housing Element sites, adopt text amendments to the Municipal Code to comply with updated state law, and make additional amendments to implement the Housing Element policies.

In September, HCD notified the City that the adopted housing element is in full compliance with the State Housing Element Law, a tremendous achievement that lays a strong foundation for the future of housing in Cupertino. Looking ahead, the City is remains committed to implementing the strategies outlined in the Housing Element to addressing housing affordability, accessibility, and equity.

For more details on the Housing Element, please visit cupertino.gov/housingelement.

Transportation Updates

Silicon Valley Hopper Grant Funding Update

The City of Cupertino has received a reimbursement check of $1.131 million from the State of California for Year 1 of the Silicon Valley Hopper Santa Clara expansion. This marks the first check from our successful $8.465 million Transit and Intercity Rail Capital Program (TIRCP) grant, which will support 50% of the SV Hopper shuttle expansion from FY23-24 through FY26-27.

Additionally, in collaboration with the City of Santa Clara, we're proud to have secured $500,000 from the Transportation Fund for Clean Air Program, managed by the Valley Transportation Authority (VTA). This funding is designated for the third year of the SV Hopper program (FY25-26), and the City of Cupertino and Santa Clara will share this award in line with our cost-sharing agreement. These developments not only enhance public transit offerings but also underscore our commitment to sustainable transportation in the region.

Learn more about Silicon Valley Hopper at cupertino.gov/shuttle.

Active Transportation Plan

With many of the projects from the 2016 Bicycle Transportation Plan and 2018 Pedestrian Plan completed, there are now evolving community needs to build on these successes. By developing a unified plan, Cupertino can address overlapping areas of concern more effectively, align policies and goals across different transportation modes, enhance the overall connectivity and safety of all roadway users, and ensure a more efficient implementation of transportation infrastructure improvement projects.

The Cupertino Active Transportation Plan (ATP) aims to enhance the City's transportation infrastructure by promoting and facilitating active transportation modes, such as walking and bicycling, for all ages and abilities over the next 10 years. The project will review existing infrastructure, policies, and community needs associated with bicycling and walking. This analysis will involve data collection and close community engagement with diverse stakeholders, including local businesses, schools, and community organizations.
