CUPERTINO

Wow, it's 2020, and just like that, we are into another decade.

I've been hearing all the puns about having perfect vision, which made me think about how many of us don't clearly see, communicate, or interact with each other in a meaningful way anymore.

Recently, I was eating lunch at a local hot pot restaurant when a family was seated next to my friend and I. The family included four kids and a dad out having lunch together on a chilly Saturday afternoon. While I was having a conversation with my friend, I glanced over before the family had ordered their food. All five of them had their heads down, staring at and typing on their phones.

My friend and I continued our conversation while the family had their orders taken. Their food arrived and they put away their phones for a moment. But there was complete silence. The only time there was any talking was when their order was taken by the waiter. Other than that, not a word was uttered between them. There was no conversation.

It's no wonder that a time when we are more digitally connected than ever with people across the world, we're feeling more and more isolated within our own communities.

Maybe I'm a bit old fashioned, but I think what has been missing for a while—and not just in Cupertino—is human connection where we truly communicate for the common understanding of each other rather than speaking to respond.

Getting to know one another and understand each other's "story" helps us appreciate those around us, whether it be in the workplace, in public, or at home. We all have stories to share that could enrich someone else's life. We just have to slow down and listen.

I plan on spending time this year making more genuine connections. I want to gain a better understanding of people I don't know all that well so I can enrich my life and deepen my connections.

I hope, if you are feeling disconnected, that you do the same.

Deborah Feng
City Manager

Protections for Tenants

Tenant Protection Act of 2019

On October 8, Governor Gavin Newsom signed California Assembly Bill 1482, the Tenant Protection Act of 2019. The bill took effect on January 1, 2020, and sunsets on January 1, 2030.

AB 1482 permits annual rent increase caps of up to 5 percent plus inflation or 10 percent, whichever is lower; protections for just cause and no-fault evictions; relocation assistance; and revised tenant noticing requirements. Most multifamily rental properties that are at least 15 years old are subject to this law.

Clean Water and Storm Protection Fee Cost-Sharing Program

On July 5, 2019, Cupertino property owners voted on and approved the 2019 Clean Water and Storm Protection Fee. The new fee appeared on Cupertino property tax bills in tax year 2019/2020 as a special assessment titled "2019 CUPT STORM WATER." This fee will be used to prevent litter and other pollutants from reaching local creeks and the Bay, as well as provide timely maintenance of aging stormwater infrastructure.

To reduce the financial impact this fee may have on low-income property owners, the City Council approved a cost-share program to lower the annual fee for qualifying residents. If you qualify, you may apply for the cost-share program online at Cupertino.org/watercostshare. Upon approval, the City will refund 20% of the Clean Water and Storm Protection Fee collected from your 2019/2020 property tax bill. To qualify for the program, your total household income may not exceed limits below:

No. of Occupants	Max Income
1	$51,250
2	$58,550
3	$65,850
4	$73,150
5	$79,050
6	$84,900

If you already participate in PG&E's CARE or FERA discount programs, you will automatically qualify by providing a copy of a recent PG&E bill. All other applicants will need to provide proof of income. For details about the program and application requirements, visit cupertino.org/cleanwater or call the Environmental Programs Division at (408) 777-3236.

Clean Water and Storm Protection Rebates Available

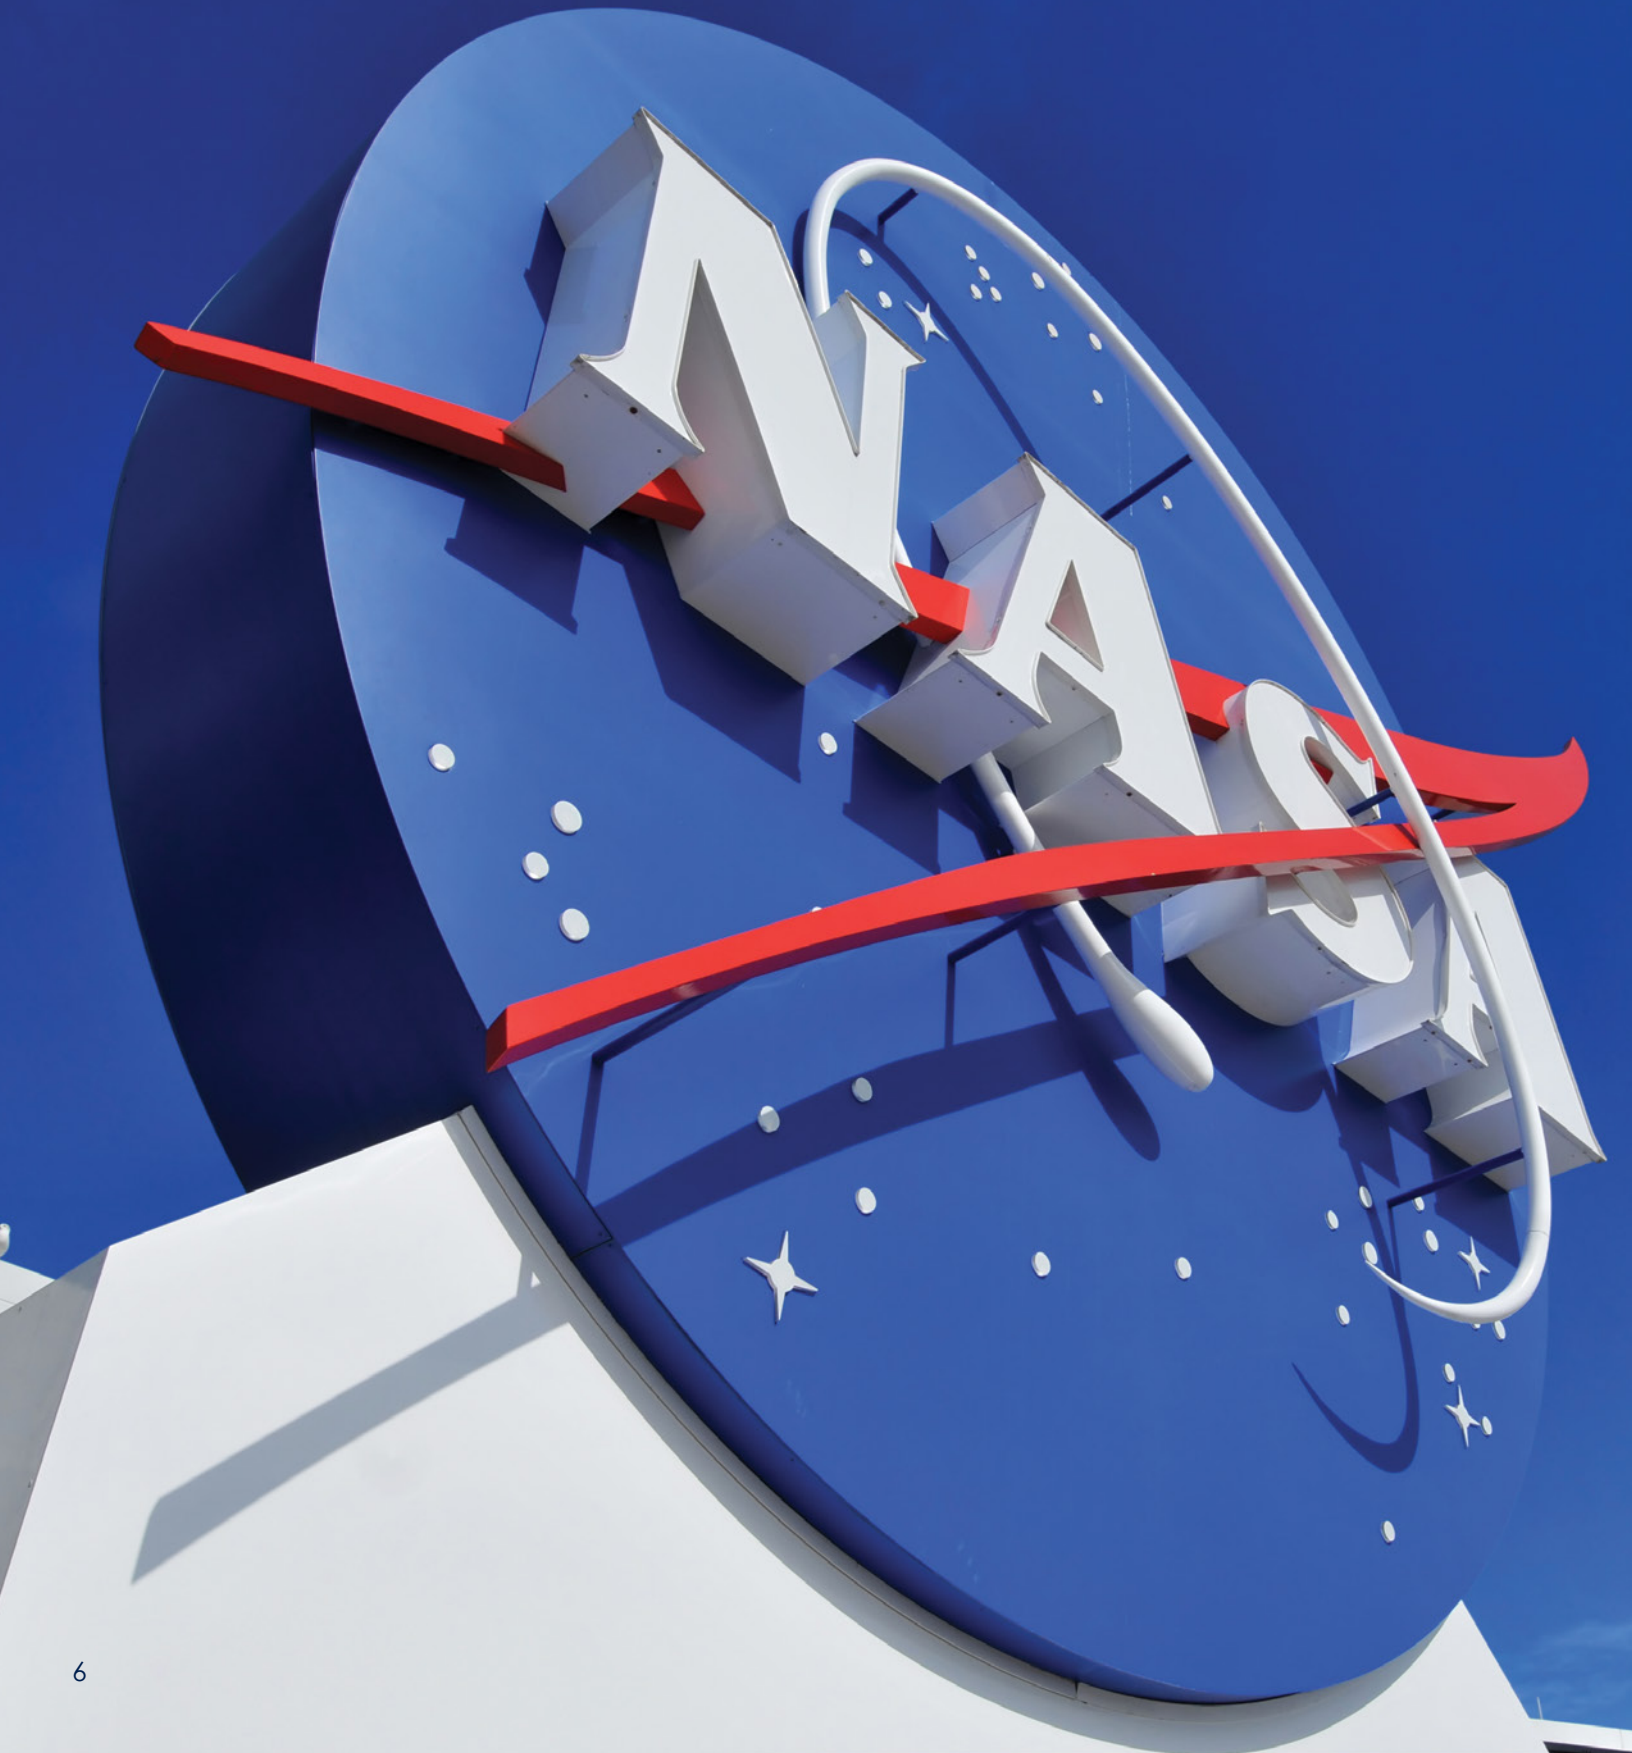

If you are planning to install a new driveway, you may want to consider a permeable paver or pervious concrete alternative, which allow water to soak through the ground instead of running off with potential pollutants into the storm drain. Qualifying projects are eligible to receive a rebate of $3 per square foot of impervious surface removed, up to a maximum rebate amount of $900. Rebate information, project requirements, and the application form are available at cupertino.org/cleanwater by clicking "NEW! Clean Water Rebates" in the left menu.

If you are interested in collecting rainwater for use on landscaping, the City of Cupertino is using a portion of the Clean Water and Storm Protection fee moneys to match rebates offered by Valley Water for installation of rain barrels, cisterns, or rain gardens. Interested Cupertino residents can work directly with Valley Water for rebate assistance. Information is available at scvwd.dropletportal.com/rainwater-capture-rebate-details.

For questions about these programs, contact Cupertino Environmental Programs staff at Environmental@Cupertino.org or (408) 777-3236.

NASA Speaker Series Comes to Cupertino

NASA has landed in Cupertino for a year-long speaker series aimed at educating, motivating, and entertaining the community.

NASA's vision is to reach for new heights and reveal the unknown for the benefit of humankind. Some of the people who have made that possible will share their experiences, knowledge, and passion with event guests.

NASA's employees have diverse backgrounds but are united by a common purpose: to pioneer the future in space exploration, scientific discovery, and aeronautics research. In addition to its core values, the NASA team embodies a few shared characteristics that are integral to our success. Each of these attributes are underpinned by NASA's core values and mission: curiosity, team-oriented, excellence, passion for exploration, agility, and resilience.

But each speaker will bring their own unique history, perspective, and story.

For example, the first event launched in January with guest speaker Jerry Davis, who was the Chief Information Officer at NASA's Ames Research Center from February 2013 to July 2018. He also held the position as NASA's Global Chief Information Security Officer in Washington, D.C., from 2007 to 2010, leading NASA's cybersecurity program during the final flights of the Shuttle Transportation System (STS) also known as the Space Shuttle.

His discussion, titled "Life as an Existential Threat," focused on how he overcame the existential threat of life—including extreme poverty, hunger, homelessness, and racism—to become one of the most inspirational security executives today.

The next session will be held on February 19 from 4:00 to 6:00 p.m. at Community Hall. The guest speaker will be Dr. Wendy Okolo, an aerospace engineering researcher in the Intelligent Systems Division at NASA Ames Research Center.

Information on future sessions can be found at cupertino.org.

Agency staff will be available to provide information in response to frequently asked questions and questions from the public.

Coffee Talks Series Continue

Since last October, more than 100 residents have attended the City's monthly Coffee Talks Series across Cupertino. These informal meetings have been held at Bitter + Sweet, La Terra Bakery & Café, Panera Bread, and Nosh Bagel Café.

City Manager Deb Feng and a City Council representative have listened to numerous questions, complaints, and suggestions. Topics have included Vallco redevelopment, traffic, school enrollment, taxes and much, much more.

The City thanks everyone who's attended these events and encourages others to make time for the last two events in February and March. The next event takes place on Friday, February 14, from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. at Hobee's, 21267 Stevens Creek Boulevard. The last event will happen on Friday, March 13, from 8:30 to 9:30 a.m. at Philz @ Main Street Cupertino, 19439 Stevens Creek Boulevard.

All attendees will also walk away with a reusable mug! See you there.

Cyclists & Motorists: Avoiding the Right Hook

Separated bike lanes, which use concrete curbs and posts to create a physical barrier between the bike lane and motor vehicle traffic, have been built on McClellan Road to enhance safety for cyclists. Unlike traditional roadways, these new barriers prevent drivers from merging into the right turn lane/bike lane before completing a right turn. This difference in design means that cyclists and motorists need to negotiate space at the intersection itself, which might be unexpected. This change has the potential of resulting in a right turn conflict called a “right hook.”

The right hook is one of the most common collisions between cyclists and motorists. It occurs when a motorist makes a right turn directly in front of a cyclist, cutting the rider off. This action by the motorist is illegal and warrants a traffic ticket.

To avoid this conflict, both motorists and cyclists should follow these helpful tips:

Cyclists

- Approach every intersection or driveway by scanning over your left shoulder and slightly slowing down. This simple act informs approaching drivers that some interaction is taking place, and gives you time to adjust to a potential turn conflict.
- Anticipate drivers turning right, even if they have not signaled. If a driver in front of you is going to turn right, stay behind their vehicle. Do not pass on its right side.

Motorists

- When making a right turn, always look at your mirrors and over your right shoulder to ensure you see any oncoming cyclists and don't drive into their path.
- Yield to any cyclists who are present.

This simple three-second action is critical to ensuring the safety of all roadway users.
