City of Cupertino Hires Matt Morley as New Public Works Director

CUPERTINO, CA – The City of Cupertino is pleased to announce the hiring of Matt Morley as the new Director of Public Works. Morley will start with the City on April 4.

“We are delighted to welcome Matt to the City of Cupertino,” said City Manager Jim Throop. “I feel confident that our community will benefit from a seasoned Public Works Director such as Matt.”

Morley currently serves as the Parks and Public Works Director for the Town of Los Gatos, where he has been since 2013. In his role, he manages all operations and capital programs for the Town, including facilities and fleet maintenance, park and street maintenance, capital project programming and delivery, and real estate transactions and planning. Morley previously worked at the City of San Jose in a variety of management and leadership positions, including serving as the Fleet Manager and Director of Fleet and Facilities.

“I am excited to join the exceptional leadership team in Cupertino and to help expand on the amazing work that the Public Works Department provides for the residents of the community,” stated Morley. “Cupertino is known in the Bay Area as a high-performing city, and it is an honor to participate collaboratively with the City Council, residents, and City staff in delivering our services.”

Morley is a South Bay native who holds a bachelor’s degree from UC Davis and an MBA from the University of Phoenix. He is married with three grown children and enjoys hiking, wine tasting, and travel.
